Interface and Experience of Space

Date: 22-10-2022

Time: 1:00 PM to 3:00 PM

Venue: E-210, (2nd Floor, E-Block), School of Architecture

OBJECTIVES:

Inspire creative and practical designs among budding architects that enhance the user experience through thoughtful spatial arrangements, sensory engagement, and functional integration. By focusing on the dynamic relationship between people and their environments, the event seeks to advance understanding of spatial design principles and to showcase the talents and vision of emerging architects.

DESCRIPTION/ REPORT

As part of the National Level Techno-Management Fest, the Department of Architecture at KLEF, Vaddeswaram, hosted the 'Interface and Experience of Space' competition, focusing on innovative architectural designs that enhance user interaction and spatial experience. This event attracted participants from across the country, challenging them to create designs that thoughtfully consider how individuals engage with their environments. Competitors presented a diverse range of projects that emphasized sensory engagement, functional integration, and dynamic spatial arrangements. The competition highlighted the importance of user-centered design in architecture, showcasing exceptional talent and creativity in reimagining how spaces can be experienced. 'Interface and Experience of Space' successfully provided a platform for aspiring architects to demonstrate their skills and explore new dimensions in architectural design.

OUTCOMES:

The competition highlighted the importance of considering human interaction in architectural design and also provided a valuable platform for emerging architects to gain recognition and share their visionary ideas. The winning designs stood out for their exceptional ability to blend aesthetic appeal with functional utility, enhancing user experience through thoughtful spatial configurations.
