Hackathon

Dates: 24.07.2019

The Computer Science and Engineering Department at KLEF is committed to fostering a culture of learning and empowering students to explore and develop their unique talents and abilities. In line with this ethos, the department's Student Association, FOCUS, has taken the initiative to organize an exciting and intellectually stimulating event: a Hackathon.

The Hackathon is designed to provide students with a platform to showcase their creativity and problem-solving skills in the captivating realm of Artificial Intelligence & Machine Learning. Participants will have the opportunity to tackle real-world challenges by selecting problem statements from this intriguing domain.

Each participating team, comprised of four members, will be assigned a specific problem statement. Over the course of 48 intense hours, teams will work collaboratively to devise innovative solutions to their chosen problem. The challenge extends beyond mere conceptualization; teams are expected to develop fully functional prototypes that encompass graphical design, interface design, and project management.

The Hackathon not only serves as a test of technical prowess but also encourages participants to demonstrate their ability to work effectively as a team under pressure. Creativity, critical thinking, and resourcefulness will be key attributes that teams must leverage to craft winning solutions.

At the conclusion of the event, a panel of judges will evaluate the submissions and determine the best solution, recognizing the team that has demonstrated the most innovative and effective approach to addressing their assigned problem statement. The winning team will be celebrated for their achievements and awarded accordingly, marking their success in navigating the Hackathon challenge.
