Report on A one-day Faculty Development Program on "Modern and Practical System Design."

Resource Person: Mrs. Hema Jampala (Alumni), Director of Engineering at CPP Investments, Canada.

Date: 20-03-2024

Timings: 10:00 AM to 5:00 PM.

Venue: Rose Hall

The Academic Staff College (ASC) in association with Alumni Relations, KLEF has conducted a one-day Faculty Development Program on "Modern and Practical System Design" on 20-03-2024 by inviting Mrs. Hema Jampala (Alumni), Director of Engineering at CPP Investments, Canada as a resource person.

Introduction of Guest of Honor to faculty by Mr. P. Arun Reddy, Academic staff College:

The resource person Mrs. Hema Jampala addressed the faculty members on the following:

This century has witnessed an unparalleled upheaval of revolutionary new technologies that have fundamentally changed economies. Practical modern-day amenities like as GPRS, Uber, Airbnb, Apple's Siri, Amazon's Alexa, and on-demand streaming media have transformed almost every aspect of our life. Furthermore, it is a fact that only those businesses who were adaptable and swift enough to such disruptive technological changes survived the competition while others are still having difficulty, such disruptive technical developments managed to survive the competition.

For example, Blockbuster had a total of 9,094 locations, but it was eventually forced to close due to a combination of factors, including a failure to adjust to new technology advancements. In addition, the internet, cellphones, robotics, automation, artificial intelligence, big data, and analytics have sparked a technological revolution that has given rise to new sectors and closed the traditional ones.

Resource person Mrs. Hema Jampala addressing the faculty:

Modern delivery is an ecosystem for delivery that enables businesses to match the hyper-productivity of modern businesses by rapidly delivering the necessary features (at least once every two weeks) and supporting a single customer outcome. Additionally, it allows them to transition to remote work while guaranteeing that vital projects and systems continue to function with the highest level of security, efficiency, and quality thanks to complete stack teams focused on products. It also goes without saying that, in order to thrive, end users require highly accessible, regularly releasable, high-value products that can be used anywhere, anytime, on any platform, and at any time.

The session also the important

included
elements of Modern Delivery.

- Product Management Culture

The most important dimension (and perhaps the most difficult to achieve) is bringing a change in the company culture. Culture is found at the intersection of values and behavior. It is a holistic approach to create a unique yet intuitive experience for customers when they use the product. It embraces a product development lifecycle right from ideation to design to development to deployment and, ultimately, the support that is customer-led, insights-driven, fast, and connected.

- Customer Obsession

Empowering the customer implies that empowered product managers work closely with the customer at every step. Such steps can include employing methods like design thinking, customer experience, value-stream mapping and optimization, and utilizing reusable assets like cloud component repositories, user stories, and architectural patterns.

- Full Stack Development

In the past, technology workers had deep focus on a particular set of techniques and technologies to create discrete components of an application. Today, skills need to be broader. It has become a necessity more than ever before for developers to be capable of coding for frontend and backend application functionality or API service with equal ease. By taking this approach, product development teams become much more productive and flexible.

- Cloud-Native Development, API and Microservices

Cloud-Native technologies are used to develop applications based on services packaged in containers, deployed as microservices, and managed on elastic infrastructure through agile BizDevOps processes for continuous delivery workflows, open-source toolchains, and reusable APIs. Modern architecture breaks down the environment into reusable factions with a centrally managed set of controls and governance over data quality, so that data is open and shared, controlled, and governed.

- Agile BizDevOps

This is the foundational block on which the entire modern delivery approach is built. The entire software execution is obsessively focused on creating value across business process operations and technology. It leverages the power of automation while ensuring that the security aspects are enveloped around the model right from product inception, development and onto product sustenance.

As she concludes, Mrs. Hema said that it is quite clear that Modern Delivery is not only the need of the hour but also an imperative in the current times. In a remote-only situation, companies will have to move much faster than planned from private data centers to public clouds as workloads need to be moved to a place from where modern delivery can happen. Moreover, rising customer expectations means that it's easier than ever for organizations to switch vendors to fulfill business goals. Hence, the faster one switches to modern delivery, the better product management he is capable to offer.
