The Academic Staff College (ASC) and the Department of Design Thinking and Innovation (DTI) have collectively organized a five-day training on "Design Thinking and Innovation" for the newly joined faculty at KLEF. The program was scheduled from 12-04-2024 to 17-04-2024. A total of 36 newly joined faculty from various departments have attended the program. Head of the department of DTI, Dr. Narasimha Raju and his team acted as the resource persons for the five-day faculty development program.

Design Thinking and Innovation (DTI) department at KLEF is committed to encouraging an innovative and entrepreneurial culture among its staff and students. The department's mission is to develop elite business people with the ability to positively influence society and the wider globe.

Day 1, 12-04-2024

Introduction of Principal Academic Staff College:

Principal, Academic Staff college (ASC), Dr. I. Govardhani in her inaugural speech said that the main objective of the FDP on Design Thinking was to stimulate educators by combining Critical and Design Thinking, which would lead to more innovative solutions that were oriented on the demands of the client.

The course also attempted to teach teachers how to use critical thinking to effectively confront obstacles and solve real-world issues.

Dr. Suresh addressing the participants

Day-1 of the FDP covered exploring design thinking, contextualization and sustainable development goals. The session was handled by Dr. R. Shankar from DTI department.

Design Thinking: Design thinking is a human-centered approach to innovation that draws from the designer's toolkit to integrate the needs of people, the possibilities of technology, and the requirements for business success. It involves a mindset characterized by empathy, creativity, and iterative problem-solving. Design thinking encourages multidisciplinary collaboration and a willingness to experiment and learn from failure.

Contextualization: Contextualization involves understanding the unique social, cultural, economic, and environmental factors that shape a particular problem or situation. It emphasizes the importance of tailoring solutions to specific contexts rather than applying one-size-fits-all approaches. Contextualization acknowledges that what works in one place or community may not necessarily work elsewhere, highlighting the need for localized insights and strategies.

Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs): The SDGs are a set of global goals to address pressing social, economic, and environmental challenges. These goals encompass a wide range of issues, including poverty eradication, gender equality, climate action, sustainable cities, responsible consumption and production, and more. Achieving the SDGs requires collaborative efforts from governments, businesses, civil society, and individuals worldwide.

Integrating these three elements involves leveraging design thinking methodologies to develop contextually relevant solutions that contribute to the achievement of the SDGs.

Day 2, 13/04/2024: Fostering Empathy and Problem Definition

Dr. R. Shankar addressing on sustainable development goals

Day-2 session was handled by Mr. N. Ratnakanth, from DTI and the topic of the day was Fostering Empathy and Problem Definition. The resource person said that fostering empathy and problem definition are critical components of the design thinking process, as they lay the foundation for understanding the needs and aspirations of the people for whom solutions are being designed.

In the context of design thinking, fostering empathy involves developing a deep understanding of the people who will ultimately use or be affected by the solutions being designed. It mainly requires observation and engagement, active listening and empathy mapping.

In practice, fostering empathy and problem definition are often interconnected processes that unfold iteratively throughout the design thinking process. By prioritizing empathy and problem definition in the design thinking process, designers can develop solutions that are not only innovative and technically sound but also deeply resonant with the needs and aspirations of the people they serve.

Day3, 15/04/2024: Generating Ideas through Ideation, Building and Testing Prototypes

The session was handled by Dr. K. Narasimha Raju, HoD of the Department, DTI and the topic was Generating Ideas through Ideation, Building and Testing Prototypes. Generating ideas through ideation and building/testing prototypes are essential stages in the design thinking process, enabling designers to explore and refine potential solutions to the defined problem.

Dr. K. Narasimha Raju, HoD, DTI addressing on building and testing prototypes

Dr. Narasimha Raju emphasized that ideation unfolds through brainstorming, divergent exploration, analogous inspiration etc. Building prototype model unfolds through rapid iteration, user feedback, iterative refinement etc. By embracing a dynamic and iterative approach to generating ideas and prototyping, designers can create innovative solutions that effectively address user needs and deliver meaningful outcomes.

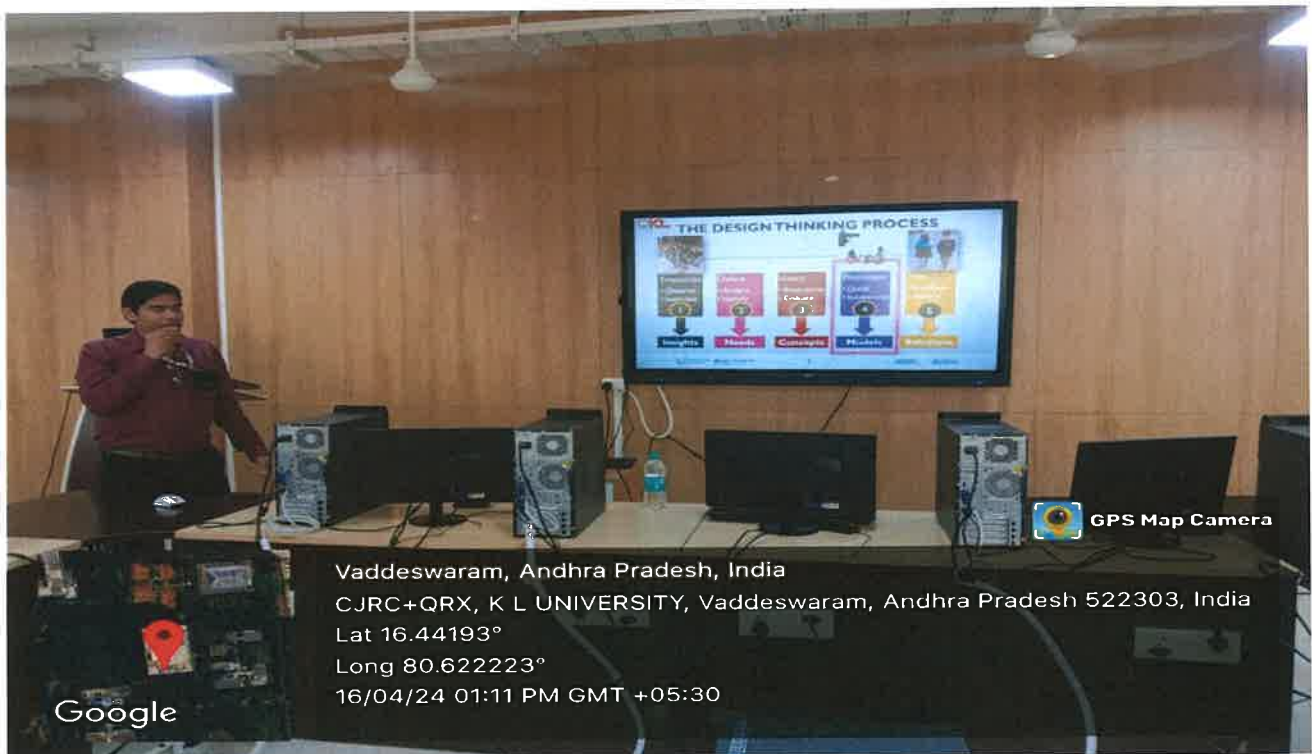

Day 4, 16/04/2024: Foundations of Entrepreneurship in Innovation

Dr. Prashanth Shukla addressing the participants

The session was handled by Dr. Prashanth Shukla and the topic was foundations of entrepreneurship in innovation. Foundations of entrepreneurship in innovation within the context of design thinking involve leveraging entrepreneurial principles such as opportunity recognition, resourcefulness, and execution to drive the creation of innovative solutions that address user needs and deliver value. By integrating design thinking methodologies into the entrepreneurial process, entrepreneurs can increase the likelihood of success by ensuring that their ventures are grounded in user insights, iterative experimentation, and a relentless focus on delivering customer value.

Dr. Ashwin Raut addressing the participants on foundations of entrepreneurship

Day 5, 17/04/2024: IBM Certification on Enterprise Design Thinking practitioner (Proctored Certification)

On the day-5, Dr. Ashwin Raut explained the faculty about the IBM Certification on Enterprise Design Thinking practitioner and the procedure to take up the assessment test upon completion of the Design Thinking and Innovation course. All the participants have attempted the assessment test as per the guidelines given by the resource persons and the program concluded with closing remarks by the Principal, Academic Staff College and taking a group photo.
