The program focused on introducing faculty members to LaTeX, a high-quality typesetting system often used for academic writing, and Typeset.io, a modern research paper collaboration tool.

The FDP was organized to empower faculty members with the necessary skills to effectively use these tools for creating, formatting, and submitting research papers, theses, and other academic documents.

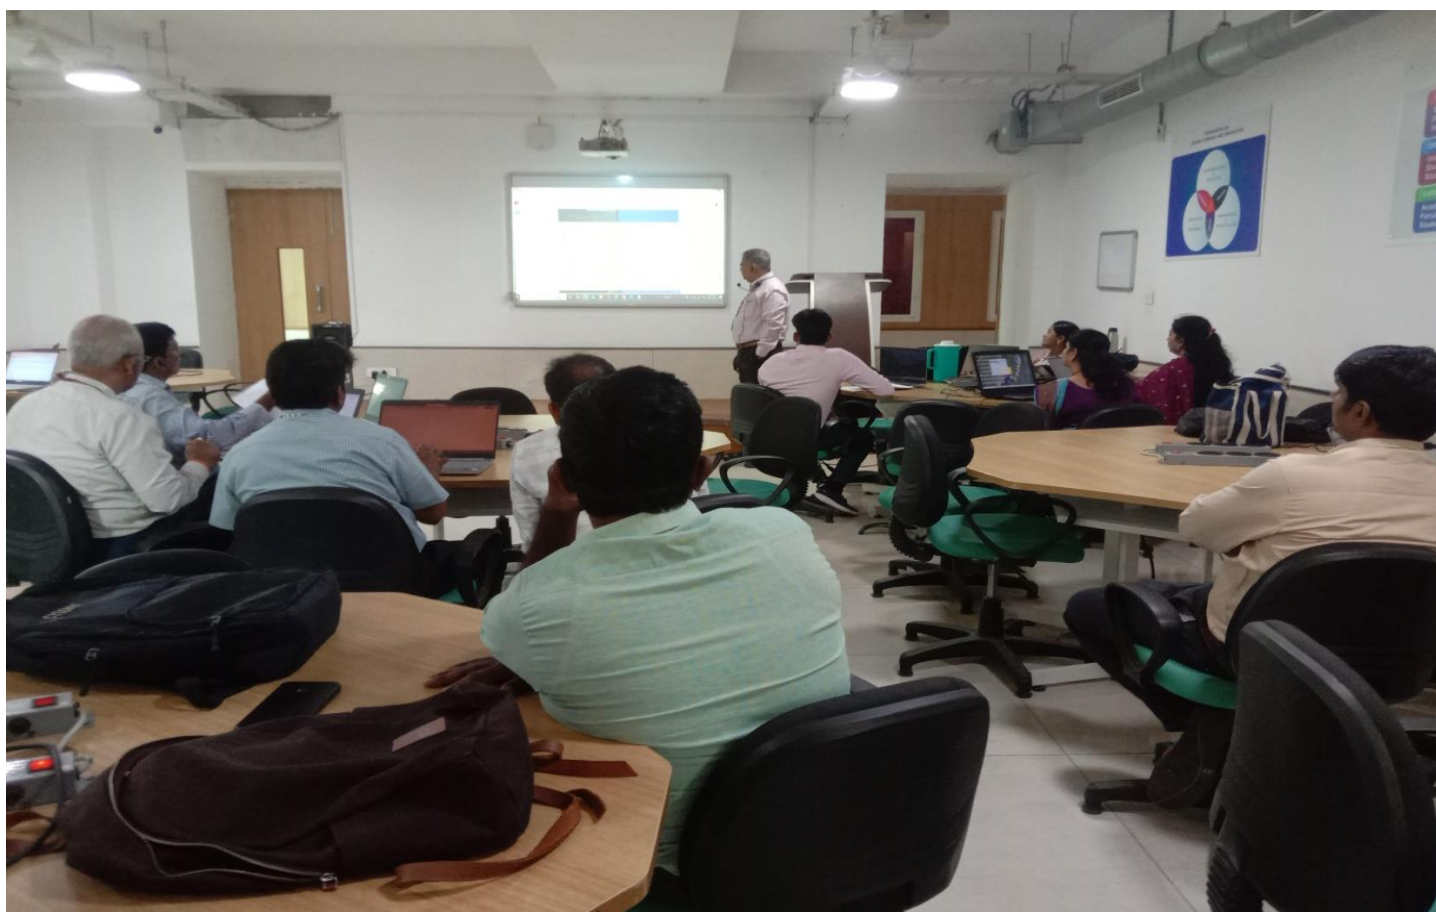

The first four days of the FDP was led by Dr. Viswanath Shenoi, HoD, IR&D focused on key features of LaTeX, its working, document structure, common LaTeX packages etc.

Day-1: 09-12-2024.

Welcome address by Dr. Govardhani, Principal, Academic Staff College (ASC).

Dr. V. Viswanath Shenoi, HoD-IR&D, KLEF handling the session.

Objectives of LaTeX:

1. Introduce LaTeX: To familiarize faculty members with the LaTeX typesetting system, emphasizing its powerful features for formatting academic papers, creating complex mathematical equations, and managing bibliographies.
2. Promote Typeset.io: To introduce faculty members to Typeset.io as a modern, web-based research tool that offers collaboration, easy formatting, and citation management for academic writing.
3. Enhance Productivity: To enable faculty to increase their productivity by learning how to efficiently use these tools for drafting, revising, and formatting academic documents.
4. Foster Collaboration: To enhance the collaborative potential of academic writing by demonstrating how both LaTeX and Typeset.io can be used for joint research projects and publications.
5. Build Research Competencies: To improve the quality of academic research documentation, helping faculty publish papers that meet the highest standards of formatting and academic integrity.

Introduction to LaTeX:

The first day began with an in-depth introduction to LaTeX. Participants learned about the system's background, its relevance in academia, and the benefits it offers over traditional word processors. The day included an overview of the LaTeX environment, document structure, and key commands to get started. Participants were shown how to install LaTeX on their systems, and a demonstration was given to show how to write and compile a basic document.

Key Topics Covered:

- What is LaTeX and why is it useful in research and academia?
- Installing and configuring a LaTeX environment (TeX Live, Overleaf).
- Creating a basic LaTeX document (structure, sections, headings).
- Understanding LaTeX document classes (article, report, book).

Day-2: 10-12-2024.

Advanced LaTeX Techniques:

On the second day, participants delved deeper into advanced LaTeX functions. This session covered complex formatting options such as inserting mathematical equations, creating custom tables, and inserting and referencing images and figures.

Emphasis was placed on LaTeX's citation management features, which allow users to integrate reference libraries and generate bibliographies efficiently.

Key Topics Covered:

- Inserting and formatting mathematical equations using LaTeX.
- Creating and managing tables, figures, and graphics.
- Advanced document styling (fonts, page layout).
