Introduction

The Academic Staff College (ASC), KLEF, Vaddeswaram Campus, in association with the Value Education Cell (VEC), organized a “Faculty Capacity Building Programme for Student Well-being and Early Intervention” on 26-03-2026. The programme was conducted with the objective of sensitizing faculty members towards the importance of student mental health and equipping them with essential skills to identify and respond to early signs of distress among students. The session was facilitated by Dr. B. Pavan Kumar, Assistant Professor, VEC, KLEF, and Mrs. B. Sumani, Psychology Counsellor, VEC, KLEF, who brought valuable expertise in the areas of mental health, counselling, and student well-being.

The programme aimed not only to strengthen the role of faculty as academic mentors but also as responsible gatekeepers who can support students beyond academics. It focused on developing awareness about psychological challenges faced by students and empowering faculty to take timely and appropriate actions to ensure student well-being.

Programme Details and Sessions

The session began with an overview of the growing importance of mental health awareness in educational institutions. The resource persons highlighted the increasing academic pressures, social challenges, and emotional issues faced by students, emphasizing the need for faculty intervention at an early stage. Participants were introduced to the concept of “gatekeeper training,” where faculty members play a crucial role in identifying warning signs and guiding students toward appropriate support systems.

A key component of the programme focused on recognizing early signs of student distress, including behavioural, emotional, and academic indicators. The resource persons explained how changes in attendance, performance, communication patterns, and social interaction can signal underlying concerns. Faculty members were guided on how to approach such situations with sensitivity, empathy, and confidentiality.

The session also emphasized effective communication strategies for interacting with students facing challenges. Participants were trained on active listening skills, non-judgmental responses, and building trust with students. Role-based scenarios and examples were discussed to help faculty understand how to initiate conversations and provide initial support without overstepping professional boundaries.

Another important aspect covered was the process of early intervention and referral. The resource persons explained the importance of timely referral to professional counselling services and how faculty can coordinate with the Value Education Cell for appropriate support. The programme also addressed common misconceptions related to mental health and encouraged participants to create a supportive and inclusive learning environment.

In addition to student-focused strategies, the programme also highlighted the importance of faculty well-being. Participants were encouraged to manage their own stress, maintain work-life balance, and adopt healthy coping mechanisms. The session emphasized that faculty well-being directly influences their ability to support students effectively.

The programme was highly interactive, with participants actively engaging in discussions, sharing experiences, and clarifying their doubts. The practical approach and real-life examples made the session insightful and relatable.

Conclusion

The Faculty Capacity Building Programme was highly impactful in enhancing awareness and preparedness among faculty members regarding student well-being and early intervention. It successfully equipped participants with essential skills to identify, respond, and support students facing emotional or psychological challenges.

The initiative taken by the Academic Staff College in association with the Value Education Cell was well appreciated, as it contributes to building a supportive academic ecosystem that prioritizes both student and faculty well-being. The programme reinforced the importance of proactive intervention and empathetic engagement in fostering a healthy and positive learning environment.
