About the FDP :

Introduction to Human Values

The long history of mankind has seen a lot of progress. Science has enabled us to improve our understanding of the physical reality around us, while technology continues to offer conveniences in increasingly newer ways. The human beings are able to see the need for peaceful co-existence at the level of human society and recognize the need for education as a “fundamental need.” While we have made tremendous advancements and innovations, the question still remains – Are we satisfied with the state of affairs today? We are still faced with serious problems at various levels.

At the human level, we can see that there continue to be issues in Individuals with respect to lack of clarity on life goals, contradictions and stress, at the level of human relationships in the family, problems are due to lack of mutual understanding, increasing mistrust, insecurity, generation gap. At the level of human relationships in society we see increasing communal conflicts, exploitation, strife, terrorism and violence. At the level of nature, increasing problems of environmental degradation in various forms as well as resource depletion, threatening the very survival of the human race.

In fact, all these problems are a direct outcome of the well planned human activity carried out in the name of progress and in spite of all the advancements of Science and Technology. Where then, lies the solution? What exactly is a miss? This is an important question intriguing the human mind today. In the present context, our main stream education system has continued to enable a human being to live a fulfilling a life, in harmony with oneself and with family, society and nature.

This course ‘Human Values’ introduces self-exploration, self-confidence, commitment to learning, improvement in human relationships, imbibing universal human values and ethical human conduct. Participant learns to apply their knowledge to lead a happy and prosperous life and also to include an ethical conduct to their profession.
